Lemon Grove Leads County in Building

Lemon Grove is again leading all other districts in the county rural area in residential construction, according to an area analysis of construction activity for the last two months.

Prepared by the County Building Department, the report listed 27 new family dwellings, valued at $199,144, started in September, and 36 units, valued at $249,823, started in August, in the Lemon Grove area.

This was a swing from the Mt. Helix and Fletcher Hills area which paced the County with a surge of home building in the late spring and early summer months. Helix, in the last two months, has started only 30 new dwelling units, valued at $282,002.

The construction pace in South Bay also continued briskly with 36 new houses, valued at $199,669, in August, and nine, valued at $41,500 last month.

The Lemon Grove area has been either in the lead or near the top in residential construction since the Building Department started keeping district records on building in the unincorporated areas. Other types of construction also have been heavy in Lemon Grove with the totals reaching $286,168 in August and $253,169 in September.

In the northern part of the County, building activity was heaviest in Vista where 15 houses, valued at $89,170, were started in August, and 20 units, valued at $81,554 were started in September. In August, Vista topped the entire County in the valuation figure for all construction. The total was $563,909, due largely to eight commercial buildings valued at $429,900, and six multi-unit dwellings valued at $18,000.

Forward Junior Bazaar Dec. 3

Have you ever visited Olvera street in Los Angeles? It is a quaint lane located on Macy street and within walking distance of Union Station. The Forward Club Juniors are proud to announce that tourists and local shoppers do not have to travel up the coast to see this much talked of street. Lemon Grove's own Olvera street will be open to the public on December 3 in the form of a bazaar, at the Forward Clubhouse.

Olvera street dates back to the early days of Los Angeles history, but has nothing on the Olvera street of Lemon Grove. Although it will be impossible to erect 70 or more booths as on the old street, the club promises displays equally as colorful and interesting. It will make history as the first of its kind in Lemon Grove.

To prove this, let's take a tour of the local historic landmark. Walking through the entrance of the clubhouse, we come into a picturesque setting of color and gaiety. Stopping first at the interesting shop on our left, where the keepers, Mrs. Lillian Giles and Mrs. E. A. Ross eagerly approach and show their aprons, made by the native sponsoring organization. A black and white checkered apron with bright red trim is suggested for the individual. It is suggested or the individual desiring a coverall apron. A small pocket with a huge ruffle is ideal for the petite home maker. In the corner, a pert organdy in pastel pink and green, for that final touch when having dinner guests.

As the party moves on, it will agree that variety, quality and price is outstanding. Olvera street was never like this.

Rev. L. E. Raines is Guest Speaker

The Rev. L. E. Raines, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church of La Mesa, will speak on "Cooperation in Home Missions," at the Women's Council meeting in the Vista La Mesa Christian Church on Tuesday, at 1:30 p. m. The Women's Council of the neighboring Presbyterian Church will be guests.

The program, arranged by Mrs. Lewis Rosenfeld will include a devotional period led by Mrs. Russell Hensley and two numbers sung by the local women's quartet, Miss Katherine Mason, Mrs. Hensley, Mrs. Paul Myers and Mrs. Irvine Smith, accompanied by Mrs. H. O. Holmquist.

The family night dinner was held in the social hall of Vista La Mesa Christian Church last (Wednesday) night. Bill Hill led community singing followed by a devotional period led by the pastor, Russell Hensley. Christian Education, Stewardship, Evangelism, Worship and Property committees convened at 7:30 for business sessions.

"State Headed for Bankruptcy" Says Cloyed

Unless Proposition 2 is passed in the November 8 election, our State is heading for certain bankruptcy," said Ralph Cloyed, candidate for the vacancy in the 80th District Assembly at a County Farm Bureau meeting.

Cloyed referred to figures published by Legislative Auditor Roland A. Vandergrift, proving that a threatened 75 million dollar State deficit can be avoided by passage of Proposition 2.

"Why is it that other candidates vaguely endorse economy in State government, yet refuse to take a firm stand on Proposition 2, the greatest economy measure in the history of California?" Cloyed asked the meeting. Cloyed then pointed out that present control over State pension funds by professional promoter George McLain has cost taxpayers $90,000,000, or 138% more than before.

"We need good clean-cut representation by assemblymen in Sacramento," declared Cloyed "This begins before the election when all candidates should make sense in their promises to the voters. How can my opponents shout for more economy on one hand and dodge or endorse impending State bankruptcy on the other?"

Cloyed referred to stands taken by opposition candidates. "The same people who are urging a 'no' vote on Proposition 2 are opposing Proposition 1, which seeks to raise funds for badly needed school buildings," said Cloyed "They encourage McLain's multimillion-dollar pension graft while piously voicing economy on a measure which would insure more and better education for our children.

"I'll not dodge issues in order to win a few votes," concluded Cloyed. "I am right out in the open, fighting for good government, and if these vital propositions pass, we'll all be more than amply repaid for our efforts."

Annual PTA Carnival at L. G. School Monday

A State hearing on classroom shortages was held at the Civic Center in San Diego on Friday. Dr. John C. Carroll, County Superintendent of Schools, told the State Senate Investigating Committee, headed by Senator N. S. Dilworth, that San Diego County needs 158 new classrooms immediately. The impoverished districts, such as Lemon Grove, cannot build the badly needed classrooms without State aid which will be available if the state and local bond issues pass at the polls on November 8.

Dr. Carroll went on to say that at present over 7000 students are on double session, and that over 2000 more are in inadequate quarters. The need will grow even greater; between now and 1958, when nearly 1700 classrooms will be needed in the county.

Attending the meeting from Lemon Grove was Byron L. Netzel, District Superintendent of Schools. In his testimony before the investigating committee, Mr. Netzel said, "With the rapidly increasing enrollment in Lemon Grove, we will need 31 new classrooms." He also stated that the district has had three bond issues totaling $272,000, of which $219,999 are now outstanding. Because the district has nearly reached its legal bonding limit, only $51,000 can be expended up to 1951 for new classrooms.

The hearing was attended by representatives from school districts from all parts of the county.

Forward Club

An enthusiastic and appreciative audience applauded the performance of Charles Cannon, Jack Little and Pauline Gleason at the Forward Club party last Friday evening. The agile feet of Messrs. Cannon and Little were matched by their equally facile gestures and voices. Delighted laughter constantly punctuated their singing as they rolled through "Goodbye John" and "Little Old New York" routines from the "Red Mill." Pauline Gleason's accompaniment and Mr. Cannon's humorous interpretation of "Largo al Factotum" from the "Barber of Seville" were equally entertaining. To accompany Charlie and take his ad libbing in stride, or rather in measure, must at times require a crystal ball, but Miss Gleason is always equal to his quick-trigger whims.

Mrs. Roy L. Wright's cleverly designed pumpkin face tallies and score pads added an amusing note to the card games. The Forward Club Juniors contributed two charming cigarette girls, Beverly Hentigan and Ethel Hall, who wore striking yellow and black costumes of their own design.

Talks and Walks With Mother Nature

BY TRIXIE TREGANZA

THE COWBIRD

Among my feathered creatures says Mother Nature, just as in the human family, there are shrews and scolds, unnatural mothers—parasites who live by the labor of others and those whose lives are not clean and good; who do not live by the moral code that guides the great majority through the journey of life.

Just such a social outcast in the bird world are my Cowbirds, the Common, the Dwarf and the red-eyed cousins to the Bobolink, Blackbird and Oriole. They are called Cowbirds or Buffalo birds because wherever you see a herd of cattle or just perhaps one or two in the barnyard, you will most likely see a little bird, seven to eight inches long with soft brown head and neck. The rest of its plumage a glistening black tinged with green and purple reflections hopping about the very heels of a cow or perched upon its back searching out grubs and parasites that have buried themselves in the animals flesh. This very acceptable service that the Cowbird renders and the many noxious insects and the myriad of weed seeds that it feeds upon is surely a redeeming feature. In fact the Cowbird spends so much time at this work that it shirks some of the more important responsibilities of life.

The male bird is polygamous that is, having more than one mate during a season; and the females are polyandrous, which means having more than one mate. Mrs. Cowbird absolutely refuses to take on the responsibility of home-making, nest-building, brooding her eggs or even displaying any interest in the raising of her babies. She is a true vagabond. Like a thief in the night she skulks stealthily through the trees and shrubs searching out some soft, downy cradle, and while the mother is away, deposits her egg. In a day or two she may come back to the same nest. Sometimes as many as three or four cowbird's eggs have been found in one nest. Mrs. Cowbird has even gone so far as to kick the eggs of the rightful tenant out onto the ground. One hundred species of birds have been imposed upon by this feathered parasite. Never does she pick a bird her own size, indeed, she leaves the hatching and care of her young to the tender mercies of some little mother who is already burdened.

Sometimes the little foster mother, half realizing that this monstrous egg cannot be hers tries to dispose of it by building a new nest on top of it. If she cannot she either resigns herself or goes on in blissful ignorance tenderly bringing forth this enemy stranger within her gates. The Cowbird's egg hatches 10 or 11 days sooner than the foster parents egg and consequently receives more attention. The Cowbird baby being three or four times larger than the Warbler or Sparrow baby, demands more attention and food. And the poor foster parents must work so hard to feed these hungry ones, that their own little babies are neglected and often die. Sometimes they are kicked out of the nest by the greedy Cowbird.

It is really a pathetic sight to see a big, lumbering Cowbird trailing after a tiny mother screaming for food. It just seems she can't fill him up; but at last the day comes when he has grown up. The Cowbird is the only parasite among all our American birds, and being a social outcast, the only birds that will associate with them is the English Sparrow. Happy-go-lucky and calling out in their high pitched whistle, they make the rounds of the cow yards and cattle-pens. The Fall days find them banding together with their own kith and kin until another new year rolls around and then the heartless pirates repeat the same process.

Memorial services for Oliver R. Lawrence, who passed away Monday from a heart attack at his home, 6965 Broadway, will be held at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Beardsley's Funeral Home, Ocean Beach. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

The judges' decision was unanimous in giving the Sportsmanship award for 1949 to Miss Linda Bradley, the daughter of Bob Bradley, and was received with enthusiasm by the spectators. Dick Higbee of Grossmont scored the highest number of points. Kay Bouton, Sandra Moore, of Lemon Grove, Ted Gildred and Ginger Major also received a good share of the awards. The hearing of the Board of Supervisors on the Horsemen's petition to close the old Wiley road across Otay Valley, for an easement to construct three miles of State riding and hiking trail, was held most of the day, Monday Sup. Robbins and Gibson favored closing the imaginary road, obliterated by the 1916 flood, unused for 33 years. Sup. Rossie and Howell took an opposite stand. Dave Bird, absent, voiced opposition to vacating in a letter. The hearing was postponed pending report from the County Planning Commission, until November 21. The only horsemen present were Pres. R. S. Harness, State Regional vice president R. L. Brown and Mrs. Marge Ellison, secretary of the Horsemen's Association.

All horsemen in the San Diego area are asked to assist during the chest x ray survey of San Diego metropolitan area, for all people over 15 years. X-rays are free and take less than five seconds with no discomfort. Volunteer workers are greatly in demand, no special experience being required. Any horsemen who will help may contact the writer at Home 60422.
